Here and There.

Royalty is dying. Not only over in Europe but here in America. Perhaps the reader does not remember that such a thing existed here but it had at least, and it came to an end last week. Jonah K. Kauai, a young man, recently returned from the Hawaiian Islands, in Congress at Washington, died Jan. 7th and his body was taken back to his island home for burial. He was the last survivor of the royal family, his wife, and known in Hawaii as Queen Liliuokalani. He received a royal funeral and the procession to the mausoleum was five miles long. This procession was a spectacular affair, with the band playing the savage ways of his ancestors and was nominally a Christian; nevertheless in this moving line were numerous relics of the barbarity of the people among whom he was born and among whom he had lived.

At the head of the cortage marched two men, one carrying a Christian cross, signifying the new regime, and the other a spear, signifying the emblem of the days that had gone by.

Behind these were members of the civil government of Hawaii and of the church, the latter gathered together sharply with the bright yellow and black stripes and feathers of the Hawaiian warriors.

The last formed the guard of honor to this man who belonged to the things that were. But the last of the battles of the new order of things had been fought by the old king of Hawaii and hidden beneath a mound of floral offerings.

Old Walt Mason is a prolific writer and has many kinds of old subjects in an interesting and photogenic way. He evidently, like ourselves, is looking toward the disassembly conference, and this is why he says about it what the aggregation of slaves has to do with it. He should be spied when wars are ended and peace has come to stay, when swords are bared and carried, and no one yanks them out. There will always be quiet in future ages, the sons of men have fought, in war found pleasure, and none can measure the evil they have wrought.

The old king of Hawaii was a good man, and by nuts of his own digging and bled on by nuts of his own digging and early savage was wont to ravage, and kill off other kings. Are we so dozy, so vain and naughty, that we can't quit old tricks and start new ones? We must never sever the bones of other hickies. Is all our yearning for higher learning a wish for some disfuge to close out longing for things through, and death for conditions? Oh, don't be afraid, we are no better than men who lived in caves, whose daily labors were killing neighbors, and digging early graves? Let's have a good old fashioned war, than those ancestral hooches, sweep our cruisers and can the brutes who kill off human rubes?"

Efforts have been made from year to year to get a system of time that would begin at some point in the day and continue to the same point the next, or from one to twenty-four, instead of counting up to twelve in the middle of the day and then counting down over again.

So far conservatism has proved general adoption, but our southern neighbor, Mexico, is going to try it this year. According to their scheme the day will begin at 6 a.m. and continue up to twenty-four on the middle of the next night. This plan has its disadvantages for no provision has been made to confuse the trustful wife or old maid who has trouble in getting to sleep still continue to get in at one or two o'clock in the morning.

Appetizers for Zest.

(By Julia W. Wolfe)
Many housewives overlook the importance of an appetizer. It is most refreshing and a lot more wholesome than rich soup. In fact, many women serve them in place of soup, these days.
A simple, clinging to the conventional easy sort of appetizer consists of grapefruit, day by day. Try new things.
Make use of a variety of fruits in preparing these appetizers.

1. A delicious appetizer and very wholesome for the children. Take one orange, a small bunch of white grapes, and one-half cupful of diced peaches. Mix with a little sugar and butter, serving add a cupful of grape juice. Serve in glasses. Another fruit glass is made by taking an equal quantity of each fruit and mixing with a little orange and lemon juice. This is unusually refreshing. In summer there are so many fruits that blend, but in winter try the peach.

If you have a chicken dinner, some sort of tomato appetizer is a good choice.

A fruit appetizer, prepared la bord, is very good. A fruit appetizer is also good for a meal.

Before fish some sort of vegetable appetizer, or one containing bacon may be served.

A small, well-made, highly seasoned omelet; a small mound of cream in the center of a small plate, with a little minced parsley or a spoonful of Russian dressing, makes a delicious appetizer, quite as good to the eye as to the palate.

A tomato canape is easily made,
for the tomato jelly must be planned, make a few hours long beforehand.

For the canape, heat a pan for each person and cut it to a nest round. Butter it while hot and place it around, rather thick slices of skinned trout. On the place a spoonful of skinned trout.

A slice of broiled bacon may be added to the tomato canape to advantage.
With this the mayonnaise is omitted.

"I looks Goods Enough to Eat," How good, dad," he said.

Just a few weeks ago I went way to serve lettuce so that everybody in the house has a share of the crisp, delicately blanched heart.

From a neighbor's house, I went to the enticing advertisement in magazine. And how I wished that I had known before that to cut a crisp, had to be cut in sections, like a cantaloupe was not only the easiest way to serve a lettuce salad with mayonaise, but the easiest way, too. For, you see, all I had was a house guest who had been staying was more selfish than polite, to say the least, every day to the business as junior partner. I'm not anxious to have you make a success of your life!"

Jerry rose impulsively. "I thank you, dad," he said. "I think it over."

As he turned away to dress for the day, I heard him say to his father, "My heart was heavy within him. Becki was a little peach, but never in all the world would she meet his father's old-fashioned requirements. Yes, dad belonged to a bygone generation to have a love for the prevailing style of the day."

Just after this tip I began to take more notice of advertisements featuring foods.
Of course, the tempting pictures of delicious fruits, dairy gelatin, "goony" looking frosted cakes and savory-looking meats, bacon and ham bacon had always subconsciously been in my mind as I turned the pages looking for something interesting to read. They had even haunted me between the love and the good boy, but I did not realize how precious this was to me.
Now I see they are really worthless recipes! I never bothered to look up
